Published every Tuesday and Saturday morning from 409 Main Street, Rockland, Maine.

At the workman's house hunger looks in but does not enter.—Poor Richard's Almanac.

Many Carloads of checkers were manufactured in the town of Bethel for the Christmas holidays, the total output of the factory being over 800 barrels. Each barrel holds 36,000 ordinary checkers and the 800 barrels contain 28,800,000 single checkers.

Can ex-champions "come back?" Frank Gotch, the retired champion of the world, comes out of his seclusion with the declaration that he is ready to meet all comers, Hackensmidt preferred, with a side bet of five or six figures.

The total vote thrown for the two principal parties for members of Congress last fall was: Republicans, 5,592,844; Democrats, 5,721,830. This is about as near a tie as is ever likely to occur in casting 11,314,394 votes. As compared with the vote in 1908, both parties suffered losses, the Republicans of 1,650,000 and the Democrats 834,000.

Out of a total of 6,661 persons involved in 1,463 disasters to vessels of all classes, within the scope of the United States Life Saving Service, only 53 lives were lost and but 74 vessels were completely destroyed, according to the annual report of S. I. Kimball, general superintendent of the service for the fiscal year which ended June 30 last. Of the 1,463 vessels of all kinds which met with accidents, the life savers rendered assistance to 1,407. The net expenditures for maintaining the service for the year were $2,499,375.68. The enactment of the bill passed at the last session of Congress by the Senate providing retirement pay for members of the life saving service and others of the field service, incapacitated for duty, is urged in the report.

ARE YOU LISTED?

If not, begin the New Year right by seeing that your name is in the great social and business index—the Telephone Directory.

A listing therein is so valuable to the business man that no argument is needed to demonstrate it. An unlisted business man is like a town unrecorded on a map.

If your firm contemplates a change from its present telephone service that may necessitate a change in its telephone number, give your order without delay.

A residence telephone helps the busy housewife with her day's work, and, in addition, is a social comfort.

For details as to rates and classes of service CALL (free of charge) Manager Office 500, and an agent will be sent to see you.

CULTIVATES THE "FOUR M'S"

Real Purpose of the Wonderfully Spreading Boy Scout Movement, Which Now Has Over 300,000 Members.

One hears a great deal nowadays about the Boy Scouts, but in spite of the columns of information which have appeared in the public press, it is doubtful if there are many not connected with the movement that can give an adequate idea of what the organization is or the practical purposes for which it is formed.

The subject is interestingly summarized by the Philadelphia North American from which we quote the following:

Troops of Boy Scouts under the inspiration that has come from the merger and from the visit of General Powell have been formed in 46 states, in Porto Rico and in the Philippines; more than 3000 scout masters have been officially registered, more than 400 local councils formed and more than 300,000 boys enrolled.

The object of this nobly conceived movement, in General Powell's words, is "to give individual character, training, discipline and moral fibre to boys of all classes" by showing them how to help themselves and help others. The spirit that pervades the movement is so sane and so generous that Mr. Seton's forecast seems hardly visionary that this "man-making idea" may in a few years come to be a matter of course in the life of the ordinary American boy. As Mr. Beard says, it appeals wonderfully to boy nature, calling out the best that is in him, to cultivate the "four M's"—muscle, mind, morals and manhood. Other agencies may reform boys, but to see that they are not deformed, there is, as he says, no more hopeful or no more powerful agent than a society of Boy Scouts.

The plan of this association is to attain General Powell's ideal by instilling into the boys a love for outdoor sports. The movement is essentially for recreation. Camp life during the summer vacation is advocated and the boys are thoroughly instructed in the essentials of camping. The different troops are taught to govern themselves, and in this manner self-reliance is instilled into them. The different sports all come under the heading of woodcraft and the boys excelling in them are granted decorations.

The competitive principle is entirely eliminated in these pursuits. The endeavor is to bring up the standard of all the individuals and not to discover and develop one particular boy because he is showing wonderful prowess in some branch of sport.

The purposes of the organization are better described by publishing the requirements for the scouts of the different grades than by any other means. A boy on joining the Boy Scouts must be 12 years old and pass a test in the following points before taking the oath: He must know the scouts' laws and signs and salutes, the history of the Stars and Stripes, the four standard knots. He then takes the scouts' oath, which is the following pledge: "I give my word of honor that I will do my best, 1. to do my duty to God and my country; 2. to help other people at all times; 3. to obey the Scout law." He is then known as a tenderfoot.

Before being awarded the second-class Scout's badge, a tenderfoot must pass the following tests: 1. Have at least one month's service as a tenderfoot. 2. Elementary first aid and bandaging. 3. Signaling elementary knowledge of semaphore. 4. Track half a mile in 25 minutes, or, if in a town, describe satisfactorily the contents of one shop window out of four, observed for one minute each. 5. Make a fire, using not more than two matches. 6. Cook meat and potatoes with the camp kit. 7. Have at least $1 in a savings bank. 8. Know the points of the compass.

Before being awarded a first-class Scout's badge a scout must pass the following tests: Swimming, rowing, driving a horse, signaling, cooking, description of the proper means for saving life in accidents of drowning, fire, runaway, etc.; map reading and rough drawing and the use of an axe for felling light timber.

The whole object of the scheme may be summed up in the few words that it is to seize the boy's character in its red-hot state of enthusiasm and to weld it into the right shape and to encourage and develop its individuality, so that the boy may become a good man and a valuable citizen for our Country in the immediate future, instead of being a waste of God's material.

The nautical headquarters of the association are located in New York, at 124 East 28th street, and the pressure of business has become so great that at present more than 20 stenographers are employed.

SOUTH WARREN

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Over of Rockland visited her mother, Mrs. C. K. Spear, on New Year's day.

Miss Lizzie Copeland went to Thomaston one day last week.

Irvin Spear met with quite a bad accident last Friday. While filling a saw in the mill his hand slipped and struck against a tooth. His right hand was quite badly cut.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Old fashioned poetry, but oh so good.

—Isaac Walton.

Ode

We are the music makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea-breakers,
And sitting by lonely streamers—
We build our life and our world-folk's fate,
On the pale moon gleams.
Yet we are the makers of beauty,
Of the world for ever, it seems.

With wonderful deathless ditties
We build up the world's great cities,
And out of a fabulous story
We fashion an empire a glory:
One man with a dream, at pleasure,
Shall go forth and conquer a crown;
And three with a new song's measure
Shall translate a kingdom down.

We, in the ages lying
In the buried past of the earth,
Bull Nineveh with our sighing,
And Babel itself in our sight,
And o'erthrow them with prophesying
To the old of the new world's worth:
For each age is a dream that is dying,
Or one that is coming to birth.

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
Rockland, January 7, 1910.
Personally appeared N. S. Perry, who declares that he is president of the issue of The Courier-Gazette of January 2, 1910, there was printed a total of 4,408 copies

Before me: J. W. CROCKER
Notary Public.

A few weeks ago The Courier-Gazette devoted a portion of this column to a general lament at the marked deterioration in Maine apples, apples which one time dominated certain markets, out of which they have gradually been crowded by superior fruit grown in the west. Another Maine newspaper has reluctantly come to acknowledge this superiority and it is interesting to hear its story. The Biddeford Journal of Dec. 12, printed the following paragraph:

The Washington correspondents say that one day last week Congressman Champ Clark pulled two Pike County, Missouri, apples out of his pocket and gave them to Uncle Joe Cannon with the remark: "These were grown in a nursery which has been in continuous operation since 1835. They are the best apples in the world." This may be the truth, but we must be "shown" before we will believe it. No doubt Pike County, Missouri, produces some fine apples, for Missouri, but if Mr. Clark really thinks they are the best in the world it is because he never ate any of the fruit that would make Maine famous if the farmers of Maine would but rise to their opportunities.

The Journal states a week later that it received the following letter from Stark Brothers Nurseries & Orchards Company, Louisiana, Mo:

"Hon. Champ Clark asked us to 'show' you, so we are sending you today's preparation of a half-dozen specimens of Delicious. Now test these carefully, get the hang of the quality and then let us know if you have anything in Maine so good.

What came of it, and how the Journal man was led to take off his hat to the southern fruit, is interestingly told:

On Tuesday, Dec. 20, the box of apples arrived in good condition. Between the time of arrival and the moment of writing this the apples have been put to the test by a body of approved apple experts and the verdict rendered is unanimous, namely: That no apple ordinarily grown in Maine can compare with it for beauty, firmness of fiber, for delicacy and seductiveness of flavor, and it goes without saying that, having these qualities, it meets the requirements of the pure food laws as affecting interstate commerce, in being delicious and thus true to label.

As regards our insinuation, or charge, that Hon. Champ Clark didn't know what constituted a good apple—well, it's hard to be obliged to take back-water, but we've got to do it. We'd hoped, at the worst, to get out of it by admitting that if it weren't for our goldrind prejudice in favor of Maine and Maine products we might be induced to admit that Missouri-grown apples were superior, but now we are even that excuse will not work, and it must be conceded that when Mr. Clark told Speaker Cannon that the apples with which he tempted him were the best in the world he had ample authority for his assertion. We can even imagine Uncle Joe after having sampled that offering of fruit, second only to the fabled variety grown in the gardens of the Hesperides, as being somewhat shaken in his staid attitude and saying: "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Democrat."

The Journal has not only been converted to a liking for Missouri-grown apples, but it has become filled with fresh admiration for Hon. Champ Clark's manner of calling a bluff. Others may do it well, but he does it better, without clamor or fuss or blowing of trumpets. And, better than all else, he delivers the goods on time and in good condition.

Our congratulations to our brother editor of Biddeford. Would that we had been a member of his sampling board of experts, a position for which we feel ourselves abundantly competent to qualify. There is fruit and fruit, but nothing that for real satisfaction can compare with an apple such as the Journal man appears to have been permitted to curl his tongue around—apples that Maine used one time, we believe, to match in crispness of fiber and delicacy of taste and which we hope some day to see again filling the markets.

The newspaper sensationalists have tried hard to fashion a coolness if not an outspoken cleavage between President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt. Of course, writes a Washington correspondent, many of the stories of a break between the two men that found their way into the public prints during the campaign had no foundation. Then, when Colonel Roosevelt visited Washington, during Taft's absence in Panama, he took occasion to call at the White House and leave a pleasant message for Mr. Taft, a courtesy which pleased the President and led him to write to his old friend and predecessor a letter which has been followed by a lively correspondence, which has continued to the present day. Moreover, during Colonel Roosevelt's visit to Washington he learned that the President was not responsible for certain reports which had appeared in the press with every appearance of having been inspired at the White House, and that certain of his intimates on whom he had supposed he could depend for accuracy had become so prejudiced that their statements were wholly misleading. Since then the former President has learned that the assertions said to have come from the White House to the effect that President Taft was far from disappointed over the result of the election in New York and throughout the country, that he regarded the result as a repudiation of the former President and so rather welcomed it, etc., were either pure fabrications or emotions of irresponsible persons fairly close to the executive. This clearing of the air, so the report concludes, leaves everything in a most wholesome situation with both gentlemen occupying the same position of mental confidence and regard that marked their relations when Taft was a member of the Roosevelt cabinet. Moreover, the Colonel is going to do his utmost for the re-election of President Taft in 1912.

Democrat Legislature in Charge

Remodelled State House Turned Over to the Enemy—Empty Honors for Knox County—Gov. Plaisted's Recommendations.

(From our Correspondent)

Augusta, Me., Jan. 5
The 75th Maine Legislature assembled Wednesday morning, and was followed this morning by the inauguration of a new governor. There has been an unusually large number of visitors in the city for these events, for there were two novel features of the situation—it was in the remodelled and enlarged State House, and the incoming legislature and governor are Democratic for the first time in thirty years.

The organization of the Senate was as follows: President, Nathan Clifford of Portland; Secretary, William C. Hanson of Machiasport; assistant secretary, Harry H. Thurlough of Pittsfield; messenger, Charles H. Lovejoy of Sidney.

The Republicans nominated Edward F. Gowell of Berwick for president of the Senate, Frank G. Farrington of Augusta for secretary of the Senate and the rest of the list of former Senate officials.

The Democrats organized the House by electing Speaker, Frank A. Morey of Lewiston; clerk, C. C. Harvey of Fort Fairfield; assistant clerk, Willis W. Kelley of Farmingdale; messenger, William McGuire of Machias.

The Republicans for speaker of the House nominated John A. Peters of Ellsworth, and for clerk Edward M. Thompson of Augusta, and the rest of the list of former House officials.

The new State government, as inaugurated today consists of: Governor, Frederick W. Plaisted of Augusta; Secretary of State, Cyrus W. Davis of Waterville; State Treasurer, James F. Singleton of Bangor; Attorney General, William R. Pattangall of Waterville; Commissioner of Agriculture, G. P. Bucey of Westbrook.

Governor's Council—Alfred S. Kimball of Norway, Edward B. Winslow of Portland, Charles B. Turgeon of Auburn, Weston Lewis of Gardiner, C. G. Kilgore of Bangor, Willis Y. Patch of Bangor, Frank A. Peabody of Houlton. The Republicans nominated Frederick A. Powers of Houlton for United States senator, despite a speech by Senator Hamilton of York county in which he called for the turning down of all those Republicans who were candidates before election and were defeated at the polls. The rest of the nominations were the incumbents for the past administration.

Frederic W. Saco polled 42 votes in the Democratic caucus for Secretary of State but lost to Davis of Waterville who had 62.

Governor Plaisted in his inaugural address called for a keeping of the Platform pledge. He demanded economy, saying that "Departments and institutions should be supplied with only those appropriations which are absolutely necessary for conducting their affairs upon a reasonable and economic basis," and that "all gratuitous and enlarged expenditures must be set aside pending the enactment of those necessarily incident to the administration of the State government." To remedy the deficit he stated that it might be possible to lay a special tax upon all the property of the state as an emergency measure. Under no circumstances, must the appropriations be made to exceed the revenue.

He declared that the state tax must not be increased, despite that the last legislature would have required a seven mill tax to meet its obligations. He called for examination of the financial condition of state institutions, declaring that some of them are being financed on trustees' and treasurer's notes. Other recommendations were for primary elections, popular election of United States senators, a corrupt practice act, abolition of the income tax amendment to the United States constitution, resubmission of the prohibitory liquor law amendment to the State constitution, repeal of the Sturgis law, conservation of resources, the creation of a public utilities commission, fire protection for the forest lands, laws for the protection of factory employees, encouragement of industrial education, better equalization of taxation, and a mention was made of a proposal for a commission to study without pay, to investigate the feasibility of a statue at Gettysburg to Gen. Oliver O. Howard.

Knox county has had its share of troubles, beginning with the notice served upon Senator Staples a week ago to the effect that he was not wanted for president of the Senate, despite that his long and faithful service would seem to entitle him to unusual consideration. He accepted it meekly, however, and smiled beatifically on Tuesday evening of this week when called to the empty honor of presiding over the Democratic Senatorial caucus. Representative Oliver Otis of Rockland stirred up matters on Tuesday evening at the Democratic House caucus, when he lived up to his personal characteristic of being outspoken, and made an ardent speech against the party doing anything which might suggest affiliation with the wild land interests or other special interests. He didn't say so, but everybody inferred that those remarks were aimed at Representative F. H. Strickland of Bangor, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the speakership, and the business partner of Hon. J. P. Bass, principal owner of the Bangor Commercial and one of the prominent advocates of the interests of the wild-land owners.

With the defeat of Mr. Gardner for the United States senatorship nomination, Knox county's cup of grief was filled to overflowing. Not even a lieutenant assistant to something-or-other was granted to the original and most steadfast Democratic county in the state, and Gov. Plaisted will find that he alone can appease them, and that even so leave a man as he might shrink from the task.

The fisheries of Maine furnish employment to 11,733 men, and 50,000 people are supported by the fishing industry, according to the report filed by Hon. James Donohue of Rockland, state commissioner of sea and shore fisheries. The value of the year's catch is estimated at $5,864,000. The commissioner recommends the enactment of a drastic law against using bait for fertilizer, stating that these small herring will grow to sardine size, and be worth many thousands of dollars to the State. Clam and oyster culture are recommended and the planting of 120,900,000 lobster fry is reported.

The Maine State Game Commission report the slaughter of 2,786 game birds, 146 pure blood cattle, 165 horses and 5 sheep, all of which were found afflicted with infectious diseases.

during the past twelve months. The cost was $24,565.25, against which is set $2,657.66 received from the sale of hides. The commissioners report that a larger return could be made from salvage if the State had a law similar to Massachusetts.

The annual report of the state assessors show a state valuation of $451,780,119, which is $23,567,654 more than the valuation of two years ago. Of this $320,850,680 is real estate in cities, towns and plantations, and $55,647,793 personal estate in cities, towns and plantations, $43,880,863 real estate of wild land townships, and $1,400,783 timber on grass on public lots. The local assessors value their cities, towns and plantations at $394,051,408, which is $12,447,065 less than the valuation assessed by the state assessors on the same property. The valuation of Knox county is $15,112,220, of Rockland $5,526,458, of Waldo county $10,194,879, of Belfast $2,836,513, of Lincoln county $8,122,421.

The enlarged and remodelled Maine State House was turned over to the State House building commission by the builders on Friday forenoon, Dec. 30, of the same day. Chairman Charles S. Hitchborn of the commission addressing the governor and council in a few words said that the work was done according to the three injunctions that it be done well, on time and within the appropriation, and announced $71 surplus of the $350,000 appropriation. Gov. Fernald, who thanked the members of the commission in behalf of the state and as associates in the work, and assured them that he should regard their work as one of the great features for which future generations would give credit to his administration.

Ex-Gov. William T. Cobb of Rockland arrived on Wednesday afternoon and was one of the interested spectators of the inauguration on Thursday.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effective. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It attacks the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. Obadiah Gardner Crucified

So Declared Man Who Seconded His Nomination for U. S. Senator—Predicts Burial of Democratic Party Two Years Hence.

Charles F. Johnson, Waterville, 67.
Obadiah Gardner, Rockland, 21.
William M. Pennell, Portland, 17.

This tells in brief the story of the Democratic caucus in Augusta Wednesday night, which nominated Mr. Johnson for United States Senator by a clean majority of 29. An active and even bitter campaign against the Waterville candidate had been waged during the past few weeks, and Democrats all over the state were told of the anomalous position in which they would be placed if they nominated a corporation lawyer to the United States Senate, after all the promises they have made to the people. But the harder the opposition forces worked the more confident the Johnson men grew. In fact the actual vote was two more than they had predicted.

Mr. Gardner's name was presented by Senator Staples, who said in part: "It is a critical moment in the history of the Democratic party of Maine. The party can be fair. It ought to be fair. He is the man to whom the greatest credit belongs for the dramatic victory in September. I believe the great agricultural interests are entitled to a candidate. I have behind me the 20,000 Granite voters who have demanded a farmer for United States senator. We should not send a man to the Senate in the interests of corporations, but rather in the interests of the common laboring man. Obadiah Gardner may not have the oratory of Webster, but he has the mighty principles of Andrew Jackson and the rugged honesty of 'Abel' Lincoln. Two years ago we named Obadiah Gardner for Governor. The result of the canvass you well know and by all fairness he was entitled to a renomination but all thought otherwise."

Mr. Johnson's name was presented by Senator Boynton of Lincoln county, and Mr. Pennell's by John Clark Scates of Westbrook.

By far the most witty and eloquent speech of the evening up to this time was made by Boyden Beare of Eddington. "I am here," said Mr. Beare "to second the nomination of a man whom I believe to be right and just, one who has also worn overall on the farm and milked the cow with the crumpled horn. I have been associated with him for 12 years. I know him to be true and honest; I have known him in the dark and daylight, at home and abroad in other states, and there is not a black spot on his character. I believe him to be the best man for United States senator. I am told that he has not enough education to fill this office, but he has enough education to be an honest man and that is all that is required. He does not represent an incorporation, he is not a corporation lawyer and the Democratic party from the beginning have been charging the Republicans with electing to many corporation lawyers to office. At the commencement it promised the people that it would elect no representative of corporations to office, and now stop a minute and see how at the very beginning we are plunging deeper than ever the Republican party did in the selection of representatives of corporations."

Mr. Beare then went on to say that two years ago, Mr. Gardner was drafted as a candidate because the common people wanted him for Governor, and he got more votes than any candidate up to that time. "He didn't ask the nomination; it was forced on him. Last fall he should have had it; he was entitled to it. What happened? He was kicked out. I am accustomed to call a spade a spade, and a cow a cow, and a machine a machine. That was what kicked him—a machine. (Applause.) A machine which was run by a man whom the Republican party itself has kicked out." (Everyone knew that this was a reference to Pattangall. The applause was tremendous. It was mingled with laughter, which grew and grew and the applause increased until the whole house was in an uproar. It was a telling hit.)

"Everyone knows who turned this machine. You have a right to laugh if you want to, Mr. Gardner, but my expense I don't care. Obadiah Gardner has been crucified by Democrats. No, Mr. Chairman, I take that back. He was crucified by a Democratic machine. (Great applause and laughter.) If it be the resurrection there will be peace and harmony in the Democratic party. If it be burial, fellow Democrats, make the casket large and strong, for in it will also be buried two years hence the Democratic party. (Tram-tam-tam.) The rural parties will not stand by machine-made parties, and you can't elect a Governor in this State without the rural vote."

Ages of Development

FOR nearly three hundred years the people of New England have been manufacturing goods. Cut off from an older civilization, and with all the complex needs of life to be supplied, almost the first necessity and duty of the Pilgrims was to learn to make things. For the first hundred years their best thought and energy were devoted to supplying from their own resources and with their own labor, the varied necessities of life.

Another hundred years were devoted to the selection of the fittest of these lines of manufacture, and the gradual development of the country and the genius and environment of the people best fitted them—and to the elimination of those activities which might more successfully and profitably be conducted elsewhere.

And now we are nearing the close of the third hundred years—a century devoted to specialization. This period has seen the genius of a people turned to detail; to the invention of wonderful labor-saving devices; to the discovery and utilization of by-products; to the detection and elimination of every item of waste; and so finally to a rare perfection in the manufacture and quality of its goods.

Thus today New England offers to the world an infinite variety of goods that are the perfect fruit of three centuries of development. These goods find their way into every corner of the world, and answer every need and necessity of mankind.

You will find "New England Made" stamped upon huge shelves in Panama that are biting a way through the backbone of a continent; upon the sextant and chronometer that after so many years have guided the weary foot of man over frozen wastes to the poles of the world; upon the diamond drill which bores down and down into the eternal heat of the earth; and upon the great reflector whose giant eye searches the mysteries of unmeasured space and etches out the canals on Mars.

GEORGE A. CLOUGH

Noted Architect, Who Built Rockland's Public Library, Dead

George A. Clough, who died suddenly at his home in Brookline, Mass., last Friday night, was well known in Rockland, from his intimate association with our people seven years ago, when he was building our Public Library.

Mr. Clough was born in Bluehill, Me., and was the son of Asa and Louisa (Ray) Clough. He was educated at the Bluehill Academy and before going to Boston to study architecture made, with his father, a reputation as a shipbuilder. In 1863 Mr. Clough went to Boston and became connected with the firm of Snell & Gregson, architects, remaining with them until 1869, when he started in business for himself. Four years later he entered the city's employ as city architect. He organized the department and during his regime of ten years many notable public buildings were erected by the city from his plans. Prominent among the buildings which Mr. Clough designed is the English High and Latin School. In this structure Mr. Clough first introduced the German system, which provides for constructing opening open courts, thus affording ample light and ventilation to all parts of it. Another school, among the twenty-five which Mr. Clough planned for the city, is the Prince School, completed in 1881. He also designed the new city hall, the Westboro Insane Hospital, the Marcella Home, the Lyman School for Boys, the Durfee Memorial Building in Fall River the Bridge Academy at Dresden, Me., and similar buildings throughout New England, as well as others in Pennsylvania and New York. One of his great buildings is the Suffolk County Court house, the plans for which were accepted after an extended competition among the leading architects of the country. At the time of his death Mr. Clough was engaged in superintending a large addition to this building, involving an expenditure of about $1,000,000. Another notable production of his is the Gate of Heaven church in South Boston, a building just nearing completion, and a noble example of pure gothic architecture.

Mr. Clough won a high place in his profession, not alone for his skill and wide ability, but particularly for an elevated code of honor that accompanied his whole life, bringing him through a long experience with municipal politics without a suggestion of graft. The old-fashioned honesty born in him and nurtured by his father, was characterized his whole career. He was one of God's noblemen.

Besides the library Mr. Clough was the architect of two other Rockland buildings, the Thorndike & Dix block and the residence of W. O. Fuller. He had a large number of friends in our city and his visits here were always keenly welcomed. In 1876 Mr. Clough was married at Thetford, Vt., to Amelia H. Hinckley, by whom he had three children. The remains were taken to Bluehill for interment, of which town he was deeply fond and where he spent his summers.

BUSINESS WAS LIGHT

January City Meeting Considered One Tabled Order—What the Monthly Reports Show

A solitary order made its appearance at Monday night's city government meeting and that was one which had been laid on the table the previous month. It called for an arc light at the junction of Line and _____ place. The Councilmen took it from the table and passed it in concurrence.

The following roll of accounts had passage: Police fund, $271; fire department, $74; pauper fund, $866; contingent fund, $510; highway fund, $159; repairs on public buildings, $104; free text books, $68; transportation fund, $11; school, $176; city lighting, $54; total, $2297.

The report of Treasurer Adams showed a cash balance to the January account of $12,574. Among the disbursements of the month were $7620 on Mayor's orders and $8452 for county tax. Collector Brown's tax collections amounted to $16,176, bringing his total to $144,505. There were 23 arrests in December and the receipts of the police department were $125. Expenditures in the street department amounted to $178.

Among the Apple Trees

A Story of Farm Life

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

"I can't stay to dinner—not with your aunt here," he cried. Gladys smiled mischievously. "If you won't eat you can't plow."

"I'll stay, then," announced Jeff resignedly as he drove away to the field. That dinner was a torture for the awkward boy, for Gladys had told the story of the runaway, giving Jeff most of the credit, and both Mrs. Sanders and her sister showered him with praise until his face was as red as the tablecloth and he was forced to wipe the self-conscious perspiration out of his eyes with his napkin. He brought the uncomfortable occasion to a close as quickly as possible and left the table before he was half through on the pretext that he heard the colt kicking out in the barn.

About the middle of the afternoon Gladys went out to the field where Jeff was working with a big apple pie under her arm.

"I know you didn't eat half enough dinner," she said. "It was too bad for me to bother you so."

"I ate all I wanted," lied Jeff, at the same time hungrily eyeing the pie. "Then you don't want this?" said Gladys, starting to turn away.

"Oh, yes!" he cried in sudden alarm. "That is, maybe I could eat part of it. It looks awful good."

Gladys held it out to him. "Did you make it?" he asked as he started on the second quarter.

"Yes," replied Gladys, "but it isn't any better on that account."

"I like it better," said Jeff as he handed her the empty plate and brushed the crumbs from his overalls. It was Gladys' turn to blush now. "If you don't stop making such speeches I'll hate you as badly as I do Harold Du Val," she said.

"Do you hate him?" cried Jeff excitedly, jumping to the ground. "No," answered Gladys quickly. "It's just the speeches I hate. I like Harold very much. He'd be as nice as any one I've met—a boy and had a little ambition."

Jeff climbed slowly back to his seat again. "Did you know I was going away?" he asked.

"No!" cried Gladys, with sudden interest. "Where to?"

"To college. I want to find out things—why corn won't grow just as well if the ground isn't plowed, why there's so many ailments after a rain, why cream turns to butter when it is churned, why—"

"Why boys like pie," laughed Gladys, looking at the empty tin.

"You're making fun of me now," Jeff said in an aggrieved tone. "Indeed I'm not!" protested Gladys. "I'll be proud to have a college boy for my friend."

At the picnic Harold could not help brooding over Gladys' slight, as he chose to call it, in not coming. He devoted his entire attention to freezing the ice cream and making the lemonade and left the others to the merrymaking.

He was turning away with all his might on the crank of an ice cream freezer when he was startled by a teasing voice close to his elbow. "You don't seem to be enjoying the picnic very much," it said.

He looked up and saw Mabel standing with one pretty elbow leaning on the lemonade barrel. He noted with an approving eye that her dress was of the latest pattern and that it fitted her perfectly; also that her hair, while not quite so wavy as Gladys', framed a face almost as pretty.

"I'm not much of a hand to get over disappointments easily," he said, giving the handle a vicious turn. "What have I done to make that sister of yours dislike me so?" he added.

"She doesn't dislike you, and if she did it wouldn't be for what you've done, but for what you haven't done."

"There it goes again!" he answered crossly. "Is it a crime for a fellow to spend his father's money when his father is willing?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Mabel. "I suppose that's for you to decide. Let's talk about something else."

"All right; let's sample this ice cream."

But at the first taste Harold emitted a whoop that brought Beth hurrying over to see what was the matter.

"Maybe I did put too much vanilla in it," she admitted. "Mamma said to use plenty."

"I guess you did all right," said Harold ironically. "That means I'll have to go back to town and get some already frozen, as I wanted to do in the first place."

"It won't seem like a picnic without ice cream. You'd just as soon go after home, wouldn't you?" asked his sister coaxingly.

"Yes," he replied—"that is, if Mabel will go with me."

"I suppose I must sacrifice myself to the general good," said Mabel laughingly.

"Do you know," said Harold suddenly as they were on their way back, "I've a good mind to go to college and study law. Don't tell Gladys, though."

He went on. "She'll think I'm doing it just to please her, and I'm not at all."

"Oh, I don't think she has any such exaggerated idea of her own influence," said Mabel. "The old man and going to college, though. What's the use of living if you don't do something to make life worth while? It seems queer, too, that people that can go to college just for the asking don't seem to care much about it and those that can't go want to go so badly."

"That they raise apples to pay their way," interrupted Harold.

"But I do believe," he went on, "that we don't half appreciate the things that we get just for the asking. I wonder how it would seem if a fellow had to work for everything he got."

"Why don't you try it and see?" asked Mabel.

"Oh, it's too much bother," he replied, "and it's such fun to do nothing but have a good time. I'll probably change my mind yet and not even go to college."

Harold Du Val was not naturally indolent, and his pleasures were much less free from viciousness than those usually indulged by boys in similar circumstances, but he had grown so used to spending money without stopping to inquire where it came from, and having a good time was so much more fun than working, that he had

"Guess what we've got for you, mummy!" cried Mabel, dashing into the kitchen like a young whirlwind and throwing the folds of the dress around her mother's shoulders.

Mrs. Sanders was an undemonstrative little woman, but she had to gather up the new dress quickly to keep a couple of teardrops from falling on it.

"What would I do without my two girls?" she said and then turned to her cooking as if nothing had happened.

But the girls understood, and when Mr. Sanders came in and the supper dishes were done they made the little mother sit in the rocking chair while they draped the folds of silk around her, and their father agreed with them that "she looked just like a queen," though he had a very hazy idea what a queen looked like.

"Wasn't it fun?" said Mabel just before she dropped to sleep that night. "Let's spend all our money that way instead of going to college."

The next morning they were up and had their wagon loaded when the sun came peeping up over the haystack. It was hot after the sun began to shine, and it was hard work measuring out apples, but the money kept coming in, which made the work seem a great deal easier. It was fun, too, in a way—there were so many different sorts of people, and they made so many queer remarks.

fallen into the habit of guiding his actions solely by his own wishes, with little consideration for the desires of others.

Gladys and Mabel attracted him because they were energetic and resourceful far beyond any of the girls of his particular set. Their candid criticism of his faults annoyed him, however—not that he could deny the justice of the charges, but because it was so much more comfortable not to think about such things.

But they had set him to thinking, nevertheless, and he couldn't put the matter out of his mind. It was in this frame of mind that he had wandered into a courtroom not long before, and the impassioned plea of the attorney for the defense had inspired in him a flickering desire to be a lawyer.

So the old apple orchard promised to be the indirect means of starting still another college career.

CHAPTER V.

IT was four weeks before Mr. Sanders could leave his brother and come home, and when he finally did get back he found the plowing all done and the girls picking apples.

"I'll have to help you now to pay you back," he said, and, in spite of the girls' protests that they didn't need and didn't want any masculine assistance, he put on his overalls and began to help them gather the luscious fruit.

In accordance with Mr. Pearson's instructions, they were placing the apples in huge piles and covering them with straw until they could provide some more permanent place to store them.

"I wish we had a cold storage house," said Gladys. "These Wealthys won't keep very long any other way, and they aren't worth much now."

"You ought to have sold them to Snyder," said Mabel.

"You don't think me selling apples to a trust," Gladys answered. "I'll make them into pies and let Jeff eat them first."

"What are you going to do with them?" her father asked. "There must be nearly seventy barrels of these Wealthys."

"We might make them into cider," suggested Mabel.

"I've thought of a better plan than that," said Gladys. "The Glen City Cold Storage company stores apples for a dollar a barrel, so Mr. Pearson told me. The Wealthys will keep in storage till the middle of February, and by that time they'll be worth $4 or $5 a barrel."

The next day the girls left their father to pick apples alone and went to town to talk with the storage man.

"Eighty barrels, did you say?" asked the manager when Gladys had explained what they wanted.

"Yes," he replied. "I'll have them packed for you in the morning."

"That's all right," said Gladys. "We'll have them delivered to the Glen City Cold Storage company."

"That's all right," said Gladys. "We'll have them delivered to the Glen City Cold Storage company."

sd what they wanted. "I guess we can handle that any old right. What did you say your name was?" he went on, drawing his book toward him. He gave a surprised whistle when Gladys told him and excused himself for a moment.

"I'm sorry," he said as he came back, "but I find that we've got any more room. Good day."

The girls stared at him in blank surprise, and it was not till they were halfway home that Gladys suddenly exclaimed: "It's Snyder's doing, Mabel. You know, he said we couldn't get our apples unless we sold them to him. But we'll show him yet."

"I don't see how," Mabel objected. "We'd better have let him have them and saved any trouble."

It took about a week longer to finish picking the apples. After they were all piled and covered with straw Mr. Sanders helped the girls load up a wagon load, and they started for home to peddle them.

They found it no trouble at all to get rid of them at a dollar a bushel. Snyder's corner was already beginning to make itself felt. By the middle of the afternoon the entire orchard was gone. The girls drove around by the bank, and Gladys ran in and deposited $15. There was still $12 left if the money the apples had brought. The girls had long before agreed that some of the first apple money was to be used to buy that long wished for silk dress for their mother. By the time they had selected the dress and trimmings to go with it and reached some it was almost dark.

"Guess what we've got for you, mummy!" cried Mabel, dashing into the kitchen like a young whirlwind and throwing the folds of the dress around her mother's shoulders.

Mrs. Sanders was an undemonstrative little woman, but she had to gather up the new dress quickly to keep a couple of teardrops from falling on it.

"I'll have to help you now to pay you back," he said, and, in spite of the girls' protests that they didn't need and didn't want any masculine assistance, he put on his overalls and began to help them gather the luscious fruit.

In accordance with Mr. Pearson's instructions, they were placing the apples in huge piles and covering them with straw until they could provide some more permanent place to store them.

"I wish we had a cold storage house," said Gladys. "These Wealthys won't keep very long any other way, and they aren't worth much now."

"You ought to have sold them to Snyder," said Mabel.

"You don't think me selling apples to a trust," Gladys answered. "I'll make them into pies and let Jeff eat them first."

"What are you going to do with them?" her father asked. "There must be nearly seventy barrels of these Wealthys."

"We might make them into cider," suggested Mabel.

"I've thought of a better plan than that," said Gladys. "The Glen City Cold Storage company stores apples for a dollar a barrel, so Mr. Pearson told me. The Wealthys will keep in storage till the middle of February, and by that time they'll be worth $4 or $5 a barrel."

The next day the girls left their father to pick apples alone and went to town to talk with the storage man.

"Eighty barrels, did you say?" asked the manager when Gladys had explained what they wanted.

"Yes," he replied. "I'll have them packed for you in the morning."

"That's all right," said Gladys. "We'll have them delivered to the Glen City Cold Storage company."

Saved At Death's Door.

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayers of Transit Bridge, N. Y., when his life was won, miraculously saved. "I was in a dreadful condition," he writes, "my skin was almost yellow; eyes sunken; tongue coated; emaciated from losing 40 pounds; growing weaker daily. Virtual liver trouble pulled me down to death in spite of the doctors. Then that matchless medicine—Electric Bitters—cured me. I regained the 40 pounds lost and now I am well and strong." For all stomach, liver and kidney troubles they're supreme. 30c at W. H. Kittredge, Rockland, G. I. Robinson Drug Co. Thomaston; R. W. Wiley, Vinalhaven.

R. A. Jones of Portland was in town Wednesday.

Miss Vonie Brown of North Haven, who has been visiting friends in town, returns to Boston Saturday.

Mrs. A. C. Manson is the guest of her sister, Mrs. William Farrow in Rockland.

Mrs. F. A. Grindle returned Wednesday from Roxbury accompanied by Harold L. Vinal, who will remain in town for a few weeks.

Mrs. C. B. Vinal visited Rockland Thursday.

Owing to the Commandery installation Friday evening, the meeting of Lafayette Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., will begin at 7 o'clock.

Miss Mertie Mahoney was in the city Wednesday.

Tuesday evening in the G. A. R. hall the officers of Lafayette Carver Relief Corps were installed into their respective stations by Mrs. Hattie Davies of Rockland, assisted by Mrs. Thomas of Rockland. Previous to the ceremony of installation an excellent chicken supper was served to the company which included the Post members and their wives and members of the Circle and their families. Miss Emma Hall gave two readings and songs were sung by Miss Hazel Carlon.

Monday evening in Marguerite Chapter, O. E. S., the following officers were installed by past matron Mrs. Linda A. Jones assisted by Miss Pearl Kittredge, marshal:

W. M., Blanche Hamilton; W. P., O. C. Lane; A. M., Gertrude Hall; Sec., Mary L. Arey; Treas., Lizzie Davidson; Cond., Rose Reynolds; Asst. Cond., Lucy Reynolds; Warder, Lucinda Sprague; Sentinel, William Norton; Ada, Lena Davidson; Ruth, Nellie Arey; Esther, Lillian Libby; Martha, Georgia Roberts; Electa, Nellie Wilson; pianist, Allie F. Lane. Program numbers were rendered by Mrs. Albra Vinal Smith and Mrs. Dora Vinal Bowman in vocal duet; Miss Alice G. Lane, contralto solo, "Little Boy Blue"; Mrs. Helen Sanborn Arey, saxophone solo, accompanied by Miss Laura B. Sanborn; Miss Lane and W. F. Pierce in vocal duet, "The Lord is my Light." A supper was served.

The installation of officers in Ocean Bound Rebekah Lodge will be held next Tuesday evening.

Miss Esther Robbins spent Saturday in Rockland with her brother, William, who is confined to his home at Bay View square by illness.

J. W. Fife is prepared to fill orders for cut flowers and designs. Satisfaction guaranteed.

LINCOLNVILLE

Mrs. Eva Deane is spending a few weeks in Belfast with her uncle, I. V. Miller.

Mrs. Clementina Arey of Camden has been in town for a few days, guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Mahoney.

Among those who were home for a holiday vacation were Norman Jones of New York, Harry Moody and Percy Cross of Boston, and Percy Drake of Lewiston. All returned to their places of business Monday.

Mrs. Clara McKinney is visiting relatives in Belmont.

W. E. Dickey and Urban Young of Somerville, Mass., who have been home on a short visit, returned Monday.

Burleigh Ordway has taken the mail route from Center Lincolnville to Belfast, succeeding Rea Rankins. He made his first trip Monday.

Prof. Harrington has just closed his second term of singing school at the village, and a fine concert was given at the close of the school.

The Christmas play at the Grange hall was largely attended and about $30 was cleared above expenses.

Guiding Light Sabbath school gave a Christmas concert on Sunday evening at the town hall. A fine program consisting of dialogues, tableaux, songs, recitations, etc., was most successfully and appropriately carried out under the management of Mrs. Frank Gray.

The school presented their superintendent, Henry Peavey, with a pair of solid gold link cuff buttons. At the close of the concert Mr. Peavey gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the Christmas lesson. After the concert a fine treat of candy, nuts, and pop corn were served by the pupils of the school. That the school may continue in its good work for the coming year is the wish of all.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

In Social Circles

William Baker and Lincoln McRae left Wednesday for Palm Beach, Fla., where they will have employment for the remainder of the winter.

Wilbur M. Oxtun of Boston is on a 10 days' visit at his former home in this city.

The visit of Mrs. A. J. Huston of Portland has been responsible this week for a number of interesting social gatherings. Monday evening she was the guest of honor at a bridge party given by Mrs. E. K. Leighton, at which prizes were won by Mrs. S. T. Kimball and E. B. MacAllister. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. C. A. Rose gave a bridge party, and the prizes were won by Mrs. F. M. Shaw and Mrs. W. A. Glover. Wednesday Mrs. Elmer Bird entertained the Neighborhood Club, of which Mrs. Huston was formerly a member, at a dinner party.

Mrs. Fred Smith, who accompanied her husband to this city for the holidays has gone to Portland, where she is the guest of her sister, Mrs. George Perrow, before returning to her home in Worcester.

John D. Shepherd, wife and child, who have been in the city for several days, left this morning for Boston.

Mrs. Charles E. Bicknell, 88 Summer street, will entertain the Eastern Star sewing circle next Tuesday. A large attendance is desired as business of importance will come up.

Mrs. Hattie Merrifield arrived home last Friday from Portsmouth, N. H., where she spent Christmas with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Hiram Merrifield, formerly of this city.

A very delightful party was given Tuesday evening by Mary and Joseph McLaughlin of Brookline, Mass., in honor of their guests Miss Grace E. Dow and Mrs. J. E. Flye of this city. The Roxbury quartet furnished music and a very pleasant evening was passed by all. Refreshments of ice cream, cakes, cookies and fruit were served.

Miss Lizzie Ambrose of Frankfort is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Pleasant street.

Miss Mary Robertson has returned from Marshfield, Oregon and will make her home for the present with Mrs. G. N. Harden, Broad street.

Miss Emma Kahn has returned from a visit in Bangor.

C. H. Pillsbury is seriously ill at his home on Franklin street.

Mrs. L. L. Smith is spending the week in Boston.

Dr. C. M. Moffitt and family expect to occupy their new house on Broadway in about eight weeks.

Miss Chissie Young of Warren was in the city Thursday.

Mrs. Chester Castner of Warren is in the city guest of her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Robinson.

Notwithstanding the storm there was a good attendance at the January meeting of the R. A. R.'s at the home of Mrs. J. A. Burpee Monday afternoon. After the usual business, the following entertaining program was given:

Piano Solo, "Military March" Chopin
Contra Alto Solo, (a) "Song of a Heart" Tuneson
(b) "Honey Chime" Mrs. Carrie B. Adams
Miss Lena Lawrence
Reading, "The State of Maine Gift" Fourteen Beloved

Mrs. Ada T. Blackington
Piano Solo, "A la bien aimes" Schuyt
Contra Alto Solo, "An Old Riddle" Neldinger
Miss Lena Lawrence

Five o'clock tea and cakes were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Leander Staples, who has been a guest at Roscoe Staples', has returned to her home in Brooks.

A very pleasant family gathering was held at the home of Capt. J. A. Campbell, North Main street, Thursday evening. Among those present were Judge L. R. Campbell and family, Ernest Campbell and family, J. W. Campbell and family, E. E. Davis and family and A. L. Richardson. An oyster stew was served, together with cake and coffee.

Mrs. Ulmer F. Smith and Miss Esther Green of Vinalhaven were guests of Mrs. C. E. Meserve at Ingraham Hill Thursday.

The music teachers' Association began the New Year with a luncheon most uniquely conceived by the president, Mrs. Lella B. French, and served at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, at her home in Cambridge. Pink carnations and asparagus formed the centerpiece, and as the members found their rose-bud marked places, they joined in the ringing out the old and ringing in the new year. Dainty pink aprons on the backs of each chair provided the badges of service and successive courses were served by ready, though untrained waitresses. The absent members received frequent commiserating mention by those present, who were Mrs. French, Mrs. Leach, Mrs. Copping, Mrs. Magune, Miss Greenhalgh, Miss Ruggles, Miss Carr, Miss Holbrook. Upon adjournment to the music room the lesson for the day was taken up under the leadership of Mrs. Leach, the vice-president, and one uninitiated would scarce believe so much information on Babylonian, Assyrian, Hebrew, and Greek music could be extracted from a nut shell or productive of so much merriment. Miss Greenhalgh distributed questions for the meeting to be held Jan. 16, and appointed Miss Ruggles to present a paper on Greek and Roman music.

GERRISH-DAVIS
Joseph William Gerrish and Miss Jennie Evelyn Davis were married at the home of Rev. W. H. Mousley on Middle street, Christmas eve, the ring service being used. An auto was waiting to convey the couple to 602 Main street, the home of the bride's aunt. There they were met by many friends they have made since coming to Rockland, and showered with congratulations. The bride was gowned in white silk pongee, and carried bride roses. The couple will reside at 602 Main street. Mr. Gerrish is an employee of Thorndike & Hix, and a very popular young man about town. The bride has many friends here.

In three years the Panama Canal will be ready for use and will begin to be used, although the formal opening will not occur until four years from last Monday.

THE LOCAL MINSTRELS
Gave Good Entertainment at Rockland Theatre—John Dan "Came Back"—Rivally on Ballad Singing.

The entertainment given by the amateur minstrels in Rockland Theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings can be summed up into five words—it more than made good.

A strong chorus, catchy end songs, sentimental ballads, local jokes, professional vaudeville, and a clever drill to end with, combined into as fine a program as some professional companies have presented here.

Walter M. Tapley was manager and interloper. The comedians were John Shepherd, Fred Shepherd, Dick Martz, Arthur Leman, Austin Huntley and Charles Halstead. The other members of the semi-circle were Leon Halstead, Walter Shuman, Roscoe McKinney, Charles Huntley, Arthur Walsh, Maynard Burton, William Savage, Oscar Thornton, Arthur Lindsey, Harold Martz, Fred Hall and Francis Lorraine.

The following end songs and ballads were presented: Fred Shepherd, "That Was Me"; Arthur Leman, "That Barber Shop Chord"; Dick Martz, "Where the Weather Suits my Clothes"; Austin Huntley, "Under the Yum Yum Tree"; John Shepherd, "Casey Jones"; William Savage, "Vale of Dreams"; Leon Halstead, "You are the Ideal of my Dreams"; Roscoe McKinney, "In the Heart of the Mighty Deep"; Arthur Walsh, "Where are the Scenes of Yesterday?"

An especially cordial greeting awaited John Dan Shepherd, who was one of the originators of the local minstrels, and who came down from Boston purposefully to take part in this year's show.

His rendition of "Casey Jones" was the hit of the evening. John and Fred made a great team. The home boys also had the assistance of "Pansy" Leman of Boston, who brought down the house with "That Barber Shop Chord."

William Savage with "Vale of Dreams" and Ross McKinney "In the Heart of the Mighty Deep," were lively competitors for first honors in the ballad singing.

But that "Dr. Cook" went "further up," but when Ross came back from the depths, it found the two so well on a level that the writer is not going to undertake to say which did best. Very creditable solos, both Messrs. Martz, Huntley, Halstead and Walsh were well matched, and each deserves much credit for the success of the first part.

Mention should not be omitted of the trio, in which William Savage, Fred Hall and Ross McKinney gave a fine bit of melody.

The grand finale "When Yankee Doodle Teddy Boy Comes Marching Home Again," introduced handsome tableau effect.

While the stage was being cleared for the olio the management threw in a couple of Edison pictures for good measure. Eretto Bros. did some wonderful head balancing stunts, and were a whole show in themselves. Miss Eliza Martz, singing and dancing comedienne, had it all over the vaudeville artists. Shepherd and Halstead did a good dancing turn, under difficulties.

The drill by 16 young ladies was excellent. The military dancings were Clara Thomas, Nettie Magune, Lina Black, Frances Raymond, Florence Hemmingsway, Gladys Britto, Alice Brazier, Sabra Hatch, Esther Prescott, Beulah Studley, Laura Sweetland, Mary Libby, Lula Studley, Alice McCurdy, Adelaide Savage. The girls were instructed by Capt. James F. Carver.

Mrs. Cooper, who lived with her nephew, Capt. Ed. Spaulding, broke one of her legs by a fall.

John T. Berry was elected president of the Knox & Lincoln Railroad.

Pat McAuliffe signed to play with the Cambridge polo team.

The most northerly store in Rockland was A. J. Bird & Co.'s. The most southerly one was Snow & Pearsons'.

W. V. Wentworth of this city was managing editor of the Bowdoin Orient.

The officers elected by Claremont Commandery were John Bird, H. C. Chapman, E. H. Clark, C. G. Moffitt, Job Ingraham, H. J. Sleeper, W. H. Titcomb and Henry M. Wise.

Alonso Traflet was badly cut and bruised by a large falling rock while at work in the Bird quarry.

Anybody can wash clothes.

All that is required is soap, (preferably Lenox Soap), water, tubs, a boiler and a wringer.

But there are easy ways and hard ways of doing the work.

The easy way is the best way. It gives the best results—for the laundress and for the clothes.

The easy way is described on the inside of the wrapper which surrounds every cake of Lenox Soap.

Buy a cake and read what is said under the heading, "Wash-Day Hints."

PYGMALION AND GALATEA

Edward S. Stearns

The story of Pygmalion and Galatea is laid in the studio of this Grecian sculptor. Edward S. Stearns, who represents this ardent and ambitious mythological character, has been well chosen for the part. Earnestly desiring greater power and usefulness in life, and having achieved distinction in whatever he has undertaken, he naturally typifies the part he is to play. Pygmalion is an artist and longs to give the breath of life to his masterpiece. His ardent prayers are heard and answered, and although this seems a fairy story in our day, still it represents the fulfillment of our heartfelt desires when persisted in. And the play also shows that we sometimes get more than is good for us when our prayers are answered. Go and see how you interpret it.

SOUTH UNION

Miss Elizabeth Harding came home from Beverly Farms, where she is teaching, last Saturday, accompanied by her cousin, Mary Harding. Her friends had planned a surprise party on her return, but owing to the storm it was postponed until Monday evening, when some twenty-five were present and presented her with a chafing dish, ice cream and cake were served and all pronounced it a very pleasant time. On Wednesday evening she gave a whist party at her home where she served refreshments from her chafing dish and cigars to the gentlemen.

Miss Harriet Williams returned to her school at Mt. Desert on Friday, after a vacation of three weeks at her home.

Mrs. Wallace Jones (nee Phoebe Hawes) has returned to Hebron where she is attending school.

Saturday last was the coldest day of the season, the thermometer registered 14 degrees below.

Clarence Moody caught a porcupine in a trap back of the island last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Robbins spent Christmas with Mrs. Robbins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Carter, at Rockland.
